GERMAN SIEGE GUNS CANNONADE ANTWERP WITH AWEFUL EFFECT

Invading Forces, Aided By Krupps,
Consistently Drive Small Force
Of Defenders To Inner Defences
Of The City

London, Oct. 8.—"A grave view of the situation taken by the authorities," wires the Antwerp correspondent of the Daily News. "The great guns have told the tale."

"The fighting around Antwerp has been a battle of Krupps against men. Every day and night the fighting has continued with deadly effect against the forts while the shrapnel and shell have made many of the trenches untenable."

"As fast as the Belgians were compelled to withdraw from a position the Germans moved up and occupied it. The Belgians frequently fought bravely and stubbornly with infantry and frequently they repulsed the Germans but these repulses always meant a renewal of the artillery attacks by the Germans with the eventual retirement of the Belgians."

"In their present position the Germans, even with their second largest gun, are able to reach the city." The correspondent of the Chronicle at Antwerp, under date of Wednesday, takes a contrary view. He says: "There is an air of quiet confidence that the Germans will never capture the city. Numbers of the forts are still holding out with great stubbornness and the threatened bombardment is a desperate maneuver to try and force them to capitulate in order to save the city from damage."

"It is rumored that Emperor William has offered the Iron Cross decoration and $5,000 marks to the first man entering Antwerp."

"For 24 hours the Germans have made scarcely any advance. They bombarded the village of Luth fiercely but the Belgians held the place until it was in flames before they evacuated it."

"Near Termonde, the Germans are still fighting desperately to cross the river Scheldt. The latest news is that they have not yet succeeded."

"The Germans are pressing forward on the east. They crossed the river Nethe on the east and are only held at bay by the efforts of the Belgians. This offensive movement is said to have cost the Germans 20,000 men."

"On the south, in the region of Contich, Boen and Wilbroeck, the German attacks appear to have been brought to a standstill."

The Amsterdam correspondent of the Chronicle, under Wednesday's date, says the Germans have crossed the Nethe and are advancing on Antwerp from that side. Another army seems, he says, to be making an attack in an easterly direction from the villages of Westmalle.

Under Tuesday's date, the Times Antwerp correspondent says: "The precise strength of the German attacking force is unknown. The most authoritative estimate is that they number 125,000 men and are well provided with artillery including some heavy 26-centimetre and apparently one 42-centimetre guns. The last named big gun, however, is rarely used. The weight of the German attack during the night was thrown on that part of the river near Lierre."

The Telegraph's correspondent in Belgium, under Tuesday's date, says: "The fighting between the allies and the enemy has been of a furious character. Advancing between the forts, the German infantry were mowed down in thousands. They are, however, attacking the fortress in great strength, having brought fresh troops from Brussels in the last few days. They hurled their infantry recklessly against the allies' trenches and, while they lost enormous numbers of men, eventually they succeeded in crossing the Nethe river."

"From all accounts that reach me, the German infantry contributed very little towards the progress of the enemy. Their marksmanship was very poor and it was only by hurling forward successive bodies of men that they succeeded in making any advance."

"On the other hand, their big guns are admitted to be very effective and what losses there have been among the allies were caused almost exclusively by shrapnel."

"Today the Germans renewed their attempts to force the passage of the Scheldt but, up to the moment of writing, without any more success than previously. There has been fighting all along the line between Grembergen and Schoonaarde, but with the exception of desultory sniping across the river it consisted of artillery practice."

"Again the enemy concentrated his attention on the Belgian position at Schoonaarde, where the only remaining bridge not under the shelter of the Antwerp forts is a tempting bait; but he never approached within infantry striking distance. This in spite of a continuous bombardment, with the idea of silencing the Belgian batteries and of shelling the infantry from their trenches which were in easy range of the river bank. As a matter of fact, the German field guns were even less effective than yesterday, when enfiladed and outranged, they were compelled to withdraw further south towards the main position at Alost."

"Today the enemy's shell fire imposed a severe strain on the Belgian infantry in the trenches. Hour after hour shrapnel burst over them, inflicting considerable although not a serious number of casualties. Under this trying ordeal the gallant defenders held their trenches and accounted for every one of the enemy who dared to show himself on the opposite bank within range of their rifles."

NAVAL EXPERT GIVES FIGURES ON WAR LOSSES

Dr. Duesing Says Number of German Casualties Has Been Exaggerated.

A letter received today from Dr. Karl Duesing, professor of mathematics at Kiel University, Germany, by his brother, Dr. Hermann Duesing of this city, would indicate that German losses, repulses and conditions are not nearly as serious as reports from time to time in cable despatches from outside sources indicate.

That the Germans have captured many prisoners and lost but few men in the total engagements is shown by official figures made public at the war office in Berlin up to and including Sept. 15, which shows that the total prisoners taken from the allies number 260,360, while total German deaths, wounded and injured soldiers, as well as those unaccounted for number but 150,168.

These reports, if authentic, place the Germans in a far better position than generally are shown in press despatches and greatly minimize the death-roll that has been entertained.

The conditions of the war as made public to the Germans is contained in the following interesting chronology of the war from September 9 to 16 inclusive:

September 9—Newspapers from Antwerp received in Germany are noted to contain editorials calculated to inflame the people and commit atrocities for which Belgium towns had already been chastised.

From Paris reports are received to the effect that $30,000 civilians had left the city.

The German reserve force of Silesia captured 1,000 of the best Russian soldiers called the "Elite Guard-corps" or the flower of the Czar's body-guard.

September 10—One thousand five hundred Serbians enter Hungary and are captured by the Austrians.

On this day it was generally reported outside of Germany that a German retreat was begun near Paris which had developed into a rout. That the retreat was most orderly and in reality not a retreat in the general sense of the word, is bulletined in Germany when announcement was made that at Meaux, 3,000 French had been captured during the withdrawal from the advanced German position.

Prince Joachim, one of the Imperial family, was seriously wounded in the left side by shrapnel.

September 13—in the eastern theater of the war Serbians are reported as bombarding the open city of Semlin. This is criticised because of war rules prohibiting such warfare where fortresses or military opposition is not shown.

September 12—in revenge for the Semlin act, the Austrians begin bombardment of the city and fortress of Belgrade. The Austrians were later reported as having raised the city to the ground in retaliation.

To this date in the prison camps the official reports show that the captured men number:

French—1,880 officers, 84,700 privates.

Russians—1,820 officers, 91,400 privates.

Belgians—440 officers, 30,840 privates.

English—160 officers, 7,510 privates.

En route to prison camp, 40,000 French captured at Maubeuge.

Sept. 13—Victory of Germans over Russians near Lyck, East Prussia; 30,000 Russian captured and 150 field guns taken.

The official casualty list as published in Berlin including 7 p. m. Sept. 15, contradicts the reports broadcasted in other countries. The figures are:

Dead—Officers 234; privates, 2,787. Total 3,021.

Unaccounted for—Officers 39; privates 3,475. Total 3,514.

Seriously wounded—Officers 330; privates 8,391. Total 8,721.

Injured—Officers 181; privates 4,051. Total 4,232.

This makes a total of losses and injured: Officers 784; privates 18,384; or a grand total of 19,168.

Paris newspapers received in Germany are noted to praise the "daring courage" of German aviators.

September 13—The Austrians gain victory over the Russians near Grodek, near Lemberg in which 10,000 Russians are captured.

September 15—Small German cruiser "Hela" was sunk by English torpedoes.

September 16—News from Switzerland tells of two French army corps which had entered Alsace were defeated with a loss of 20,000 captured.

In the battle of the river Marne, the French attempted to break through German lines and were repulsed.

A Japanese torpedo boat near Kia Chau reported blown up by German mines.

WILDMAN'S DEATH RESULTS IN ARREST OF MOTORCYCLIST

Louis Sobczak, 485 Gregory street, was arrested at his home early today on manslaughter charges following the death of Daniel E. Wildman, of years old of 737 Lafayette street, at Bridgeport hospital late last night from injuries received in being run down by a cycle at Park and South avenues, Tuesday noon. At today's city court session a hearing was set for October 15 with bail fixed at $2,000. Up to a late hour he had not been able to secure this amount. He was arrested immediately following the accident for reckless driving and had been out under $1,000 bonds pending the outcome of his victim's injuries.

Wildman had been apparently improving until last night when his condition took a turn for the worse and he failed rapidly.

He was born in New Fairfield, the son of Abraham J. and Irene (Way) Wildman. For a number of years he had been connected with the local

MELLEN'S PROPERTY LEVIED AGAINST IN BILLARD SUIT

New Haven, Oct. 8.—The feeling exists here in certain circles familiar with affairs of the New Haven company that the company's suit against John L. Billard, "Ed" Robbins, Charles E. Mellen and others, may result in showing what was done with at least a part of the millions which so mysteriously disappeared in the coffers of the Billard Company.

It is said that this disappearance will not be unconnected with legislative campaigns in several New England states.

Charles E. Mellen, coming from the grand jury room yesterday, expressed the view that the people bringing the suit must know more about the affairs of the read than he knew, and said no papers had been served on him, and that he didn't know whether any of his property had been attached.

The officers levied on residential property in New Haven, yesterday morning to C. E. Mellen, Samuel Morehouse, Edward O. Robbins and Harry V. Whipple, all of whom were connected with the Billard Company in one capacity or another.

YES, HE COULD.

"I never hear 'The Star-Spangled Banner' without feeling my heart rise into my throat and the tears come into my eyes."

"Neither do I. Do you know the words of the song?"

"Do I know the words? Sure."

"Let's hear you repeat the first stanza."

"Oh, say, can you—come and have a cigar or something."

JUST THE SAME.

"You and your wife always seem to agree on every subject."

"Yes, we seem to, but I frequently have my own private opinions, just the same."

Charles Hutchinson, 19 years old, of Englewood, N. J., was sentenced to six months in prison for vagrancy. He had lived for a month in a cave in Vanderveer Park, Brooklyn.
